Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Excerpt from The Journal of Experimental Zoology, 1921, Vol. 33 The study of the free-martin by F. R. Lilhe (17 b) has thrown new light on the field of the biology of sex, demonstrating that sexual differentiation is controllable, at least to some extent, by a certain physiological factor. Lillie discovered that in the free-martin, the female of two-sexed twins in cattle, the sex-glands and sex-ducts are modified from the normal female condition to a sterile masculinized state; that in cattle twins an anastomosis of the umbilical blood-vessels exists between the two embryos, and that this anastomosis is responsible for the alteration of the female twin, the sex-hormones from the male twin being thus enabled to gain access to the female twin through the blood current and to produce a profound modification of her reproductive system. A histological study of the same material by Chapin (17) supported Lillie s conclusion that the free-martin is a modified female. As Lillie suggested (17 a), the possibility exists, however, that definitely planned experiments may enable us to regulate time and dosage of hormones better than is done in this experiment of nature; the results of such experiments cannot of course be foreseen. Such experiments will be necessary for the full solution of the stated problem. I therefore, at Professor Lillie s suggestion, undertook to perform such a series of experiments for the purpose of determining whether or not sexual differentiation is experimentally controllable through the secretion of the sex-glands. Gonads were grafted on the membranes of developing chick embryos in relatively young stages; such embryos were then allowed to develop further, and in cases where the grafts grew,...
