Excerpt: . . . when they are not up to grade. so why not be as watchful on the other hand It isiot nearly so much the fault of principals. who can form only a superficial estimate at best in a single conversation or test. The teaclric is the one who should discover if a new pupil is heyond his grade. We do too much wholesale teaching. A teacher should try to remember that each child has a personality of his own, a life to live, and a right to have his individuality recognized and respected. Vliiii she does that. she is less likely to be ignorant of the capabilities of the children she teaches. I shall be more careful after this in my observation of new pupils. said Miss Ward. It had never struck me what an injustice it might be to grade a child too low. You always give me something worth while to think about in our litle talks. Send Katie to me and Ill do all I can for her. laced. and Y THIS title I mean, of course, utilizing the B daily reading lesson in such a way as will bear directly u on progress in speaking and writing English. here is nothing novel in this suggestion. But let us try to get a fuller view of the subject, and see if we cannot do more vital work in language and literature because of our extended horizon. Alertness on the part of the...
