Peter, named after his chair. lie, continuing instant in prayer, to his mind; on the third day after, which van the Lord s day, began to recite the office of the mass from memory, as carefully as he could, in his prison chamber. at this time. he was expecting. that he should ere long be offered up for Christ s sake as a sacrifice in defence of the faith. He was alto looking forward to the coming of those that were to institute an inquiry into his faith and life, who were to came to him, as he had been made aware, on the very day of S. Patrick, the patron of Ireland, his own first predecessor, and founder of the cathedral church of Armagh. Having been examined on the said day. and presently again on the fourth day after, he learns from the gover nor of the tower that the business of investigating his case had been committed to certain individuals. And now after he had been frequently and on various occasions tempted by divers persons to change his faith the fifth week from hit imprisonment had patted away, closing in Passion Week, when a thought suggests itself to him, I know not how, unless by divine inspiration, relative to the possibility of making his escape. A little bird, in some odd way. was the means of originating the...
